A Child's Typical Road to Literacy...

At 6 months—

A child imitates speech such as na na, ga ga, etc. and enjoys looking at books with simple pictures. How You Can Help: Talk, talk, talk, and keep talking! Sing songs. Tell stories. Read books with colorful pictures. It's never too early to start reading to your child.

At 1 year—

A child understands several simple phrases, and speaks one or more words. They love "lift the flap" and "touch" books. How You Can Help: Have conversations with them, read interactive books, tell your own stories, and keep talking.

At 2 years—

A child knows about 250 to 350 words, holds books, and looks at pictures. How You Can Help: Recite nursery rhymes. Visit the library and have your child choose some books that you can read together. Set aside time every day to read to your child. Your child will want you to read the same books over and over again.

At 3 years—

A child knows about 800 to 1,000 words and repeats familiar rhymes. How You Can Help: Play rhyming games. Encourage them to tell you a story. Have your child "read" their favorite books to you. Make sure your child has a comfortable place to read. Read their favorite books over and over again.

At 4 years—

A child uses long sentences, begins to play with words, and makes up rhymes. How You Can Help: Work on increasing their vocabulary. While reading a story, choose some new words being read and explain what they mean. Try to use the new words around the house in other situations to reinforce the words and their meanings.

At 5 years—

A child knows about 3,000 to 5,000 words, begins to match letters with their sounds, talks in compound sentences and begins to write letters of the alphabet. How You Can Help: Work on letter recognition and letter sounds. Choose a letter and see how many words you and your child can say that begin (or end) with that letter. Keep reading to them and with them.

At 6 years—

A child begins to read words, make predictions while reading a story based on pictures and text, and can read some things aloud with ease. How You Can Help: Read both fiction and nonfiction books. Ask your child what they think might happen next. After reading a book, have your child tell you what happened at the beginning, the middle, and the end of the story.

At 7 years—

A child begins to read words automatically and expands their knowledge by listening to and reading books. How You Can Help: Encourage reading (and rereading!) Limit their screen time and read with them. Read chapter books to them, or take turns reading.

At 8 years—

A child reads chapter books and is learning an estimated 3,000 words a year. How You Can Help: Keep reading with them. Read books that are above their reading level. This will increase their language growth and vocabulary. Share the reading by taking turns.

Please note: every child develops at their own rate. This information is provided as a guideline only.
